

HOLOCAUST MEMORIAL DAMAGED BY RUSSIAN FIRE

Russian shelling damaged a menorah-shaped Holocaust memorial erected at the Drobitzky Yar ravine in Kharkiv, Ukraine, where 16,000–20,000 Jews were murdered.

Yad Vashem issued a statement, saying it “deplores the continued devastation of Ukrainian cities and the loss of lives of innocent civilians, as well as the damage to historic memorial sites from the Shoah.”

This follows Russian damage to a television tower adjacent to Kyiv’s Babyn Yar site, where over 33,000 Jews were shot in September 1941.

VICTIMS OF THE BEER SHEVA ATTACK

The four victims of a terrorist attack in Beer Sheva last week included a Chabad shaliach Rabbi Menachem Yechezkel Kravitzky, who was rammed and killed by the terrorist while riding a bicycle.

The other victims were Doris Yakhbas, a 49-year-old mother of three from Moshav Gilat between Beer Sheva and Ofakim; Laura Yitzchak, 43, who was stabbed at a gas station and survived by her husband and three children; and Menachem Yechezkel, 67.

“For those who don’t know, Laura was born in Morocco, they were afraid of the Arabs there in Morocco,” her husband, Tal, said. “And what now? We are in Eretz Yisroel, and one day a terrorist got up and murdered you in cold blood, for no reason.”

Two women moderately wounded in the attack were in stable condition and recovering from their injuries.

Rabbi Kravitzky ran the shul in the city’s Nachal Beka neighborhood and managed a Kollel Chabad soup kitchen.

“Each day, he managed Kollel Chabad’s local food distribution service for the needy in Beer Sheva, distributing thousands of meals over the years, going above and beyond to serve the hardest-hit in his community during Covid,” said Rav Shalom Duchman, director of Kollel Chabad. “This horrific loss of life has robbed the people of Israel of one of its kindest and most compassionate souls, and our tefillah is that the memory of the tremendous work that Rabbi Moshe did in his life will offer some comfort to his family and the entire community.”

Two hundred right-wing activists rallied at the scene of the attack, with signs reading “Israel is committing suicide” and “Israel is financing the murder of Jews.”

There was an uproar after police confiscated the weapons of the two men who shot the terrorist for ballistic analysis and only returned them the next day. One of the men was threatened with arrest when he asked for the immediate return of his weapon due to fear of a revenge attack.

The terrorist, a teacher in a Bedouin high school, was arrested in 2015 after he attempted to join ISIS in Syria and sentenced to four years in prison. He was one of 87 Arabs jailed in Israel for affiliation with the group. A declaration he signed saying he would not return to terrorism and a “rehabilitation program” based on integrating him with supposedly less radical Fatah prisoners obviously failed to serve their purpose.

Police questioned the killer’s relatives and detained two brothers on suspicion that they saw him leave home with a knife.

In an unusual move, leaders of Israel’s Arab parties condemned the ISIS-motivated attacks. The official Facebook page of PA Television posted a photo of the terrorist with the title of shahid (martyr), but removed it by request of Defense Minister Benny Gantz.

Town of councilors from Hura, where the terrorist lived, condemned the attack and disassociated themselves from it, as did numerous other representatives of the sector.

Salameh al-Atrash, head of the Bedouin al-Qassum Regional Council, stormed out of a broadcast when an interviewer accused some members of the Bedouin community of incitement and said that al-Atrash himself once embraced a man who supported terrorism.

PROMINENT US ASSOCIATION ENDORSES BDS

In a blow for Israeli academia, the Middle East Studies Association, a non-profit founded to foster the study of the Middle East, passed a resolution by 768 versus 167 votes endorsing BDS as a means of holding Israel accountable for alleged human rights offenses.

Long accused of anti-Israel bias, MESA’s membership exceeds 2,700 and it serves as an umbrella organization for more than 50 institutions and 36 organizations.

The decision calls for an academic boycott of Israeli institutions for their “complicity in Israel’s violations of human rights and international law through their provision of direct assistance to the military and intelligence establishments.”

In 2014, MESA allowed individual members to support academic boycotts of Israeli academic institutions.

42 BOYS LOST NEAR DEAD SEA

Several dozen cheder boys from grades 5 to 8 were saved by volunteers, drones, and helicopters after they split off from a large group and wandered off in different directions in Nachal Og, a twisting canyon near the Dead Sea with many dangerous drops.

After the 42 children were reported as lost at 7:00 p.m., it took until 11:00 at night for the police’s Dead Sea Rescue Unit and other search parties to round them up and supply them with food and blankets.

“It was very late to start such a route at 4:30 p.m., certainly with children this age and certainly when the route includes ladders and is a bit challenging,” said Matan Morad, head of a rescue team. “We initially thought only 15 children were missing. The moment we understood that 42 were missing, we realized it was a completely different story.”

“Drone cameras showed us a group of 21 children and elsewhere a group of three,” Morad said. “We still needed to find all the rest. We spoke to the children with loudspeakers to calm them down. We reached them with a police helicopter, and now they are on the way home. No one was physically hurt; I hope there are no severe psychological repercussions.”

JOHNSON CRITICIZES UK UNIVERSITIES FOR ‘BEING TOLERANT OF ANTI-SEMITISM’

British Prime Minister Boris Johnson said universities in the United Kingdom have for “far too long been tolerant of casual or indeed systematic anti-Semitism.”

The prime minister made the remark in response to a question by Parliament member Andrew Percy during the “Prime Minister’s Questions” event in the Commons Chamber. Percy asked about the National Union of Students inviting British rapper, activist and conspiracy theorist Lowkey to appear at its annual conference.

Lowkey was due to perform at the conference at the end of March but pulled out after Jewish students expressed concerns about his participation in the event.

Percy said Lowkey has “engaged in anti-Semitic conspiracy theories.”

The British MP called on Johnson to do “everything in his power to ensure campuses were a safe place for Jewish students,” according to Jewish News. He also noted the rise of anti-Semitism on college campuses and cited examples of Jewish students facing anti-Semitic attacks, and being “marked down by their own professors.”

Johnson said it was important that the United Kingdom have an anti-Semitism task force “devoted to rooting out” the problem “in education at all levels.” He also said it was “very important [that] we now have—and I hope everyone understands—the need for change, for rapid and irreversible change.” (JNS)
