BOYANER REBBE TAKES ISRAELI CITIZENSHIP

Rav Nochum Dov Brayer, the US-born Boyaner Rebbe in Yerushalayim and a member of the Moetzes, took on Israeli citizenship to participate in the elections for the first time.

The rebbe said that it was unfeasible for him to sit in the Moetzes and instruct his chassidim to vote when he does not do so himself.

When one of his followers, an Israeli who lives in Switzerland, came to depart from him on Motzoei Shabbos after visiting for a family simcha, the rebbe said in astonishment, "Tuesday is election day, and you plan to lose the privilege of participating?"

When the man said his wife needed to return to her job, the rebbe said he should remain in Israel, no matter what difficulties this entailed.

DELAYED FLIGHT, NO VOTING

Hundreds of Israelis spent cash to buy plane tickets to Israel in time for election day.

One man, Meir Bernstein, wrote: "This is my decision! On Sunday, I am flying from New York to Israel to vote and persuade others to vote for UTJ! For the sake of Tzion, I will not be silent. I cannot sit overseas when the people of Yisroel are in danger."

In another instance, a man closed his business to make it to Israel.

"The moment I heard an announcement on Motzoei Simchas Torah and understood that the rebbe considers it important to come to Israel and vote and strengthen UTJ, I closed my Antwerp business for a few days to come to Israel and carry out the tzaddik's will," said Mordechai Zev Schwamenfeld, a Belzer chossid.

In another instance, hundreds of Israelis realized they had spent their money in vain when a United Airlines flight from Chicago to Tel Aviv was delayed by 12 hours and only arrived in Israel on Wednesday morning.

NETANYAHU PLOWS THE COUNTY

Many Israelis preferred spending the day off at the beach and other leisure spots, confident that their votes didn't really count. To catch at least some of them, Bibi Netanyahu plowed the country, visiting malls in 20 cities to exhort people to vote.

In one town, after being told that a man in his 20s was still asleep, Netanyahu personally roused the man from his slumber. "Get up and vote," he told him. "Instead of falling asleep again, go and persuade your friends to vote for Likud."

Warning that voting data showed a higher turnout in left-wing areas, Likud exhorted its followers to vote immediately. "Due to an increase in the percentage of votes on the left, Netanyahu is convening an emergency meeting at Metzudat Zev [the Likud headquarters] in Tel Aviv," the party announced.

At the meeting, Netanyahu told Likud MKs: "We were in a tie, but now there is a decrease now among Likud voters. We must fire up the area for tomorrow. I'm asking you to join me tomorrow on tours in 20 cities to encourage and increase voter turnout."

In an emergency broadcast on Facebook, he told thousands of followers, "They call us Nazi baboons, they call us the blind herd, they call us the forces of darkness! Let's give them the answer at the ballot box — we will get rid of them!"

Likud was troubled that numerous ballot cards printed by the party were invalid due to misspelling Netanyahu's name as "Binyomin Netanya," and that if a large number were used, it could cost them the election.

BEN-GVIR'S EMERGENCY FLIGHT

Learning that voting for the National Unity party was rampant in the central Sharon area, Ben-Gvir hopped into a helicopter and flew there from Be'er Sheva to rally his supporters.

Ben-Gvir plans to demand the Public Security portfolio in a new government if the right wins. Asked whether he considered him qualified, Netanyahu said, "I won't rule it out, but I'm not going to count my chickens before they hatch."

As to Ben-Gvir's fight to have more Jews pray on Har Habayis, Netanyahu said, "I want to maintain the status quo."

ARABS LAG BEHIND

By 2:00 p.m., when the overall voter turnout had reached 38.9%, the highest rate since 1999, the Arab percentage was stagnating at 17%.

Shocked at the outcome, Arab MK Aida Touma-Sliman adopted traditional gevald (emergency) tactics and urged Jewish voters to help save the party.

"Jewish partners, according to the current rate of voting, Chadash-Taal is in danger of not passing the threshold," she said in Hebrew. "For the first time in 74 years, there is a real chance that the clearest voice against the occupation and for Arab-Jewish partnership will disappear from the Knesset."

"I implore you: don't let the fascists win! Go vote for peace, equality, and social justice," she appealed.

At an emergency press conference, Raam chairman Mansour Abbas appealed to Jewish voters in Hebrew and begged for their support.

MERETZ RASHA OR IMPERSONATOR?

Netanya residents were shocked when a man wearing a Meretz shirt grabbed a pair of tefillin from a Chabad man near a voting booth and crudely desecrated them.

Netanyahu immediately wrote that he "strongly condemns this shocking attack by a left-wing activist," saying, "It's time to say goodbye to them and vote today."

Meretz claimed the man was likely an impersonator trying to destroy the party's reputation.

Police arrested the 61-year-old on suspicion of "harming religious sentiment by making improper use of tefillin."

KIDNAPPING IN TIVERIAH

A 51-year-old Arab was arrested after allegedly attempting to kidnap a Tiveriah woman for nationalistic motives.

The Israeli Security Service was investigating the incident.
